REPORT FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

The books are closed for 1966 and I am quite pleased with the final figures. The 94.6% payment of the total commitment was the highest figure in the last ten years. It is over 5% better than some of the years in the late 1950's. It is nearly 2% better than the figures for last year and the unpaid amount is down from 7.3% to 5.4%. I believe the improvement is worthy of praise and I think every citizen should be proud of the improvement. The highway crew has been busy with the large and small storms of the past couple of weeks. I would like to say that most individuals who plow driveways have not put much snow on the sidewalks. I hope they continue to co-operate.

The auditor from the State Department of Audit is scheduled to start work next week. There is a lot of extra work preparing for the audit but it is nice to get the audit out of the way early. I also like the idea of getting the audit report back for the current town report. If the books are not audited the very first of the year, the audit report is always one year older than the material in the town report.

This is a good time to pay 1967 excise taxes and you will avoid the rush. Seventy-five persons have already excised their vehicles for 1967.

Word was received from the office of Senator Muskie that the interest free sewer planning study loan has been approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The funds were applied for last spring and will be used to study sewer needs for the town. The consulting engineering firm of C. E. Jordan of Portland has been retained to do the work and I expect they will start as soon as the weather permits in the spring.

The planning study will be concerned with the adequacy of the present sewer system. It will also have recommendations for an interceptor system to get all of the waste to one area and it will recommend a treatment facility.

INTERESTING TALK HEARD BY CHAMBER MEMBERS AT MEETING TUESDAY EVENING

Maine regional public relations officer of the International Paper Company, Ben Pike, presented an interesting and informative talk to the members of the Greater Bethel Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening. The meeting was held at the Bethel Methodist Church, preceded by a supper.

Mr. Pike discussed the types of paper produced by the new mill of I. P. at Jay, as well as telling of the additional construction still in progress at the site. A showing of colored slides illustrated the advantages of multiple use of forest lands, particularly in the areas of recreational facilities and selective harvesting of the forest growth.

Mr. Pike also touched on the topic of relationships between large industrial concerns and the communities in which they are located. In regard to abatement of pollution, he stated that his company had spent about one million dollars at the Jay location alone.

Due to the small attendance of Chamber members at the session a curtailed business session was held. In the absence of both the president and vice president, Richard Bryant and James Fisk, the secretary Norman Greig, introduced the officers for the ensuing year. Officers serving for the coming year are: John Brown, president; William Cousins, vice president; Roger Conant, secretary-treasurer; Rev. W. H. Seldentlicker, Joe B. Farrow, Richard Bryant, members of the Executive Committee.

The president has called a meeting of the Executive Committee for next Sunday evening, Jan. 8, 7:30 p. m., at the Bethel Selectmen's Office.

NO HEAD START PROGRAM FOR S. A. D. 44 SCHOOLS THIS YEAR

The Board of Directors of S. A. D. 44 were informed Tuesday evening by Supt. Horace Maxey that the previously approved Head Start program would not be possible this year. Necessary funds for the program will not be available from Federal sources. The Directors were meeting in regular session at Bryant Pond.

It was voted that the District would continue membership in the Maine School Boards Association.

In a discussion of proposed salary requests it was suggested that any proposed increase not exceed 10% of the total budget. Milton Mills, reporting for the Property Committee, had nothing further to report on the Woodstock High School sewer repair project. The committee has approved maintenance items included in the budget.

For the Building Committee, Lester Bickford reported that rough grading at the school site was progressing, moving shallow material initially, deep cut later, gravel area and drainage area.

School plans are ready to go to the State for approval. Due to the delay in the disposal system plans will not go out to bid before the first or middle of February.

A special meeting of the S. A. D. 44 Directors will be held at the Lake Mills School at 7:30 p. m. on January 9. On the agenda for this meeting is the report of the curriculum committee, salary schedule and the 1967 District Budget.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION LISTS COUNTY ROAD PROJECTS FOR NEXT TWO YEARS

The Maine State Highway Commission will ask for a $3.3 million appropriation for improving highways in Oxford and Franklin Counties during the next biennium.

The figure is part of a $73 million state budget proposal made public last Friday by the commission. A supplement to the budget lists $6 million worth of urgently needed work, including $700,000 that would be spent in the two counties.

(Of the total proposal, the federal government's share is more than $45 million and the state's $22,384,000. So the state share of the two-county budget would be about $1.1 million.)

Oxford County projects, totaling $1,903,700—rebuilding jobs unless otherwise indicated—follow, with the fiscal year construction date in parenthesis:

Rumford: U. S. 2, 3 miles, running west of the urban-rural line, $200,000 added to 1966 money for a total of $350,000 (1968); U. S. 2, 9 miles southwest from a point to one mile north of South Rumford Road, $150,000 for a total of $400,000 (68); and Rumford-Andover, Rte. 5, 2.3 miles north from a point 2 miles south of the town line to a previous improvement, $91,200 for a total of $285,000 (68).

Canton: Rte. 103, 2.4 miles west from the village rail crossing to a previous improvement, $450,000 (69). This joint is aimed at eliminating hazards on a stretch where many accidents have occurred.

Roxbury: Rte. 17, 1.6 miles running north from the town line, $200,000 (68), to eliminate curves, dips and box culverts.

Fryeburg: Rte. 5, 1.3 miles north to a point 3.5 miles north of Rte. 302, $200,000 (69); and Rte. 302, new surfacing from the Bridgton line 6 miles west to a previous improvement, $60,000 (68).

Lovell: Rte. 5, 1.3 miles north from a point 2 miles north of the town line, $200,000 (68) to eliminate various hazards.

Buckfield: Rte. 117, .5 miles from a point 2 miles west of the village to an improved section to eliminate hazardous knolls, $30,000 (68).

Albany: Rte. 5, 1.8 miles from a point 2 miles north of the Crooked River, hazardous curves, $40,000 (68).

Greenwood: Rte. 26, eliminate a hump and blind intersection 5.6 miles south of U. S. 2, $15,000 (68).

Oxford: Rte. 25, eliminate blind intersection with Rte. 121, $35,000 (68).

Gilead: U. S. 2, hazard 1.2 miles west of the Bethel line, $32,500 (69).

Newry: Rte. 26, widen two bridges north of U. S. 2, $30,000 (68).

Grafton: Rte. 26, widen 3 miles to allow safe entrance to the state park 2.4 miles north of the Newry line, $50,000 (68).

Supplemental requests for Oxford County include: U. S. 2, at Rumford, Falls Hill retaining wall, $150,000 (69); Rte. 20, at West Paris, blind intersection at Tran Corner, $40,000 (69); Rte. 232 at Woodstock, reverse curves 3 miles north of Rte. 26, $35,000 (69); and Rte. 5-113 at Hiram Village, widen Saco River Bridge, $100,000 (68).

Included in the SHC Cumberland County budget are these Bridgton projects: Rte. 117, 1.2 miles northerly from Rte. 302 to a previous improvement, $100,000 for a $500,000 total (63); and Rte. 302, surface 6.2 miles from the Rte. 302, surface 6.2 miles from the Rte. 93 junction west to the Fryeburg line, $60,000 (68).

DEPRESSION POSSIBLE IF INCOME TAXES RAISED SAYS N. F. I. E.

The recent public statement issued by Rep. Wright Patman, Texas, that an increase in income taxes would throw the nation into a depression appears to have quite substantial validity according to the research staff of the National Federation of Independent Business.

This is strongly indicated by a special analysis of the first 11 months of the results of the continuing field research carried on by the organization during 1966 covering approximately 80,000 respondents in all 50 states.

The key indicator is considered to be the net gain of new job creation by the nation's 4,700,000 independent firms which employ 40 per cent of the entire working force.

The high point of net new job creation in 1966 was in April when the ratio of new jobs created to jobs discontinued was 4 to 1. This ratio slipped all during the year and in November, with 9,370 respondents reporting, the ratio was 2 1/2 to 1.

Computer projections of these samples against the entire 4,700,000 independent enterprises show that while in April new jobs were being created at an annual rate of 4,935,000 by November this ap-

Mrs. Alice Coffin was taken to the Chapel Valley nursing home by ambulance, Friday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Bickford, Julie, Martin and Douglas, returned to their home at Spruce Head after spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Coffin.

Carl Brooks who was badly injured in a hunting accident in November, is still confined to the Stephens Memorial Hospital, Norway. His condition is good.

Nestor Ruokolainen, truck driver for the Penley Brothers was rushed to the Stephens Memorial Hospital, Norway, last week. The truck tire which he was changing blew up, fracturing his arm and leg.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Proctor returned home Sunday after spending the past week with their daughter, Mrs. Velma Carpenter, and family, South Portland.

Miss Phyllis Lowe, Arlington, Va., spent the holidays with her mother, Mrs. Phyllis Lowe and family.

parent annual rate of new job creation had dropped to 4,587,200, or a drop of 347,800.

Allied with this is the apparent annual rate of job attrition, or decrease in payrolls. In April this rate was 1,243,740, but by November it had jumped to an annual rate of 1,828,010 jobs being wiped out, or a gain in job attrition of 584,270.

If this trend continues, by March of 1967 the rate of job attrition will equal the creation of new jobs to result in a zero gain in employment. Further attrition during the year, of course, would result in spreading unemployment.

The Federation data is not set up to make a definitive analysis of the reasons for this decline in new job creation, but it is felt significant that the downturn started after April when the impact of higher payroll taxes were felt, an dithis, coupled with higher state and local taxes in many areas, has created a climate whereby the independent firms are actively engaged in trimming payroll costs wherever possible.

The decline in the annual net rate of new job creation has been quite pronounced since 1965 when it hit a rate of over 5,000,000. By January of 1966 the apparent rate dropped to 3,981,150, by April of 1966 to 3,692,260 and by the end of 1966 the rate had eroded to 2,761,190.

Further indications are shown in the findings, of the 61 per cent of the independent firms that did not make any changes in their work force over the previous year, 29 per cent of them reported modernization and expansions of their operations, yet this was apparently accomplished without increasing their working force.

But the 11.2 per cent of firms who report in November dropping jobs from their force at an average rate of 3.53 jobs each, 28 per cent report modernization and expansion over the previous year.

It is also seen as significant that of all who report expansion, 52 per cent report this was in the form of acquiring new equipment which seems to lend credence to the belief that as taxes increase, strong efforts are made to take the "fat" out of the operations in the form of reducing to only minimum work forces.

Thus, the Federation research staff feels that an increase in income taxes would accelerate this apparent trend to further reduce employment.

Mother of March of Dimes Patient Teaches Child Braille as Precaution

"When the doctors told me my daughter was probably going blind, I determined to learn Braille and be her teacher. I wanted to cushion the shock of knowing she might lose her sight, and to try to share the experience with her."

Speaking is Mrs. Mary A. Fennell of Archer, Fla., mother of five-year-old Lucille, who has congenital glaucoma (hardening of the eyeballs). The attractive blonde and blue-eyed child is also the victim of another birth defect which consists of malformations of the lymph vessels throughout her body.

"I've been warned," Lucille's mother explains, "that if I make a mistake in her diet—such as using the wrong kind of flour in my pies—Lucille won't be with us very long."

Mrs. Fennell told of her efforts to learn Braille, and why, at the Birth Defects Center at the University of Florida School of Medicine at Gainesville. The Center is one of 77 supported by the March of Dimes across the nation.

At the suggestion of the Florida State Council for the Blind, Mrs. Fennell wrote to the Library of Congress for a book of Braille, and teaching instructions. (Available at no cost for anyone declared legally blind.)

"I thought that was all there was to it," Mrs. Fennell says. "I figured I'd just do a little studying and soon I'd be teaching Lucille how to spell by 'feeling' the raised dots. How mistaken I was!"

A person who has normal sight encounters far more difficulty learning Braille than the non-sighted. The reason is that the sighted individual relies on the faculty of sight rather than that of touch.

Lucille will not wrestle with

anywhere near as much of a Braille problem as does her mother. The child's print vision is limited to letters one inch high, so that she will never read book and newspaper type and be confused by memories and associations of the printed letter or word.

Mrs. Fennell is helping Lucille memorize the "feel" of a few letters of the alphabet in raised-dot language, and to recognize how the "feel" sounds when spoken. Mother and child make a game of it. School authorities were so impressed with the child's progress that they permitted Lucille to enter regular kindergarten.

When she enters first grade and moves into a textbook-oriented world, such classic readers as "Dick and Jane" will be unintelligible to her in conventional type. But her mother will translate such books onto sheets of "raised pinpricks," using a special Braille typewriter.

At the March of Dimes-supported Birth Defects Center, to which Lucille is taken for check-ups every few months, the specialists avoid an unqualified prediction. But if pressure against her optic nerves increases, total blindness is almost certain to result.

Understandably, this is the kind of tragedy that many fathers and mothers find intolerable to face. But Mary Fennell is facing it, the doctors say, courageously and with intelligent compassion. They wish more parents, in similar unhappy circumstances, could summon the same fortitude and sense of realism.

MY VISIT TO RUSSIA

by Lauren S. Marston

At 3:00 p. m. on August 10, 1966, I left from the East German Airport via a Russian Airline plane en route to Moscow, U.S.S.R., with the American group to attend the 13th World Poultry Congress. The plane lacked the luxury equipment we are used to, but otherwise the efficient stewardesses took good care of us (no makeup on the Russian stewardesses). We were wine and dined in-flight.

Three hours after take-off, we landed at Moscow Airport, very modern and quite spectacular. We were taken through their customs with a minimum of red tape. A 45 minute bus ride to Moscow revealed endless new apartment buildings in the process of construction or already completed (120 days for completion of one five-story unit is reported.) The Ukrainian Hotel, a large and modern hotel, proved somewhat cruder in appointments than first-class U. S. A. hotels. Plumbing, etc., was noticeably sub-standard. Each floor of the hotel keeps a sort of overseer near the elevator. All keys are turned in to her when you leave and picked up when you return. The dining room presented some problems in ordering, but usually, we got more or less what we ordered, with the exception of breakfast, where I consistently ordered omelet and ham, and received sausage and sauerkraut.

We were shown museums, etc., but most impressive was the tour to Red Square, with the Kremlin on one side, the GUM department store on the other, and Lenin's Tomb off to one end. The tomb is open to the public at 11 a. m. each day except Mondays. Long lines of people from all lands of the world are forming many hours before opening time. It is positively fantastic to see literally thousands in line to file through the tomb. This is happening year-round. The trip through the tomb itself takes only a few minutes. There is no stopping. Lenin's body looks very similar to a wax museum image; this appearance is usual for bodies preserved for long periods in a most natural appearing condition. The body is actually several stories underground. After passing through the tomb, you pass by the headstones and sculptured identification of other leaders of the Russian people.

The second most impressive thing in Moscow was a visit to the Subway. The station is entered and left by rather fast-moving escalators that run several stories underground. At train level, the entire station is marble with sculpture work motif carried out to represent some phase of the life of the people. Each station has a different motif, such as sports, the arts, industry, agriculture, etc. The trains themselves run each five minutes and accelerate to high speeds very rapidly. Upon entering the car you have the feeling that something is missing; then you realize—no ads! It costs 4 Kopeks to ride the subway and buses.

Buses are many and are both motorized and electric. They load from both ends and apparently no one collects the fare; they depend on the riders putting their 4 Kopeks in a flat device on the wall that discharges a slip of paper for a receipt. On some buses a woman to check on the fares was carried. It should be mentioned in connection with the numerous and frequent buses and subways that this is the only source of transportation for most, because very few families have cars. This is admitted and can be told by the traffic make-up. Six hundred thousand cars are to be manufactured in the coming year by a factory being set up by Fiat of Italy.

The people generally were not as well-dressed as Americans and evidently have no means to keep their clothing pressed. This to me was depressing. Also, the materials and patterns would not be acceptable in the U. S. A.

(Clothing, generally speaking, was probably 20% higher than the U. S. A. Food is probably 30% higher. Hardware, furniture, T. V., etc. about the same.)

The main streets are very wide with very generous sidewalks. Often, at busy intersections, all pedestrians go underground to get to the opposite side. Book stalls and book stores are everywhere and seem well patronized. You see people reading at every opportunity. Taxi drivers, bus drivers, if they are waiting, elevator operators, etc. On the sidewalks there are many trees, cared for daily by hand. The streets are washed daily. Also, there are many scales where a man takes your weight and tests your grip.

Department stores in Moscow had meager window displays, but in Kiev they have done quite well. Consumer goods are definitely inferior to American merchandise in my opinion (and in short supply).

We find large toy stores, a half block long, and very well stocked. You find lines and sometimes crowds around jewelry displays, sporting goods and tobacco shops (cigarettes cost 9 Kopecs). Food shops are usually specialized and appear well supplied. Drug stores sell only drugs and appear to have one doctor and pharmacist and nurse on duty. On each block of the street a man will be found, a vendor of a mysterious drink spelled Ka Ba. The equipment to dispense this drink consists of a 500 gallon drum mounted on wheels. This is connected by hose to a faucet. What comes out is a yeasty, tangy drink costing 11 Kopecs. There are also many drink vending machines with two glasses. They have rinsing equipment that each customer uses before using. There are also ice cream vendors in abundance. All stands are owned by the state.

Filling stations are few and far apart, and invariably crowded. There were many parks in the cities I visited (Moscow, Kiev, Kharkov), and they are well used. In some of them they will have large, blown-up photos of what are outstanding workers in the area. In this connection you see people wearing medals and decorations for outstanding performance. We saw only one bar as we know them in the U. S. A., but there were many places where you could drink at a table (self-service). Wine, beer and champagne seemed to be on sale in all restaurants. I saw only two drunks on the trip.

The few people in the U. S. S. R. that have motorcycles and cars are noticeably careful in starting and stopping, so as to put a minimum strain on the equipment. I imagine that parts are scarce.

Along with modernity of the big cities you see them still using primitive type brooms, made of small tree twigs. They also use a short broom about three feet long extensively. Also, they handle their dressed poultry without ice or refrigeration in many cases. Some of the poultry are brought to market feathers and all, killed by not feathered.

It appears that special attention is given to the children. I have already mentioned the large toy stores that I believe are unequalled. Children's clothing is especially priced, shoes for a boy costs $2.59 against $2.69 for adults, as an example. Each city I visited had a children's theater devoted to puppet shows and children's plays. Also there are the pioneers who have well-fitted camps here and there, and in Kiev, there is a child's railroad that is run and managed by the children. A limited number of children can spend their summer vacations here.

I was surprised to see skiing going on in Moscow. They were using a dry surface of some sort and making excellent jumps from it.

We saw state farms on the plains of the Ukraine of 30,000

SKI TIPS

WALKING

By Ace Manley
Director, Big Bromley Ski School

Walking is one of those fundamental movements that every beginner learns as he gets acquainted with those funny things on his feet that are called skis.

The most important thing for the beginner to remember in this exercise is that he is on skis, not in street shoes. Even though the maneuver consists of short rhythmic steps, it is not the same as regular walking.

The main difference is that the ski is not lifted off the snow. The ski should slide forward, always with the tip and the tail of the ski on the snow.

Each "step" is accompanied by a forward swing of the pole and the arm opposite the forward-moving leg. For example, as the left ski moves forward, the right arm is extended forward. The pole is placed in the snow near the boot, which puts the skier in a position to slide the opposite ski forward and gives balance on either side.

With each movement, the weight goes from the stationary ski to the advancing ski.

This exercise should be performed on perfectly flat ground with nothing to obstruct the skier.

Next time: "Sidestep or Climbing Steps."

acres, well mechanized and diversified, (as milk production, hay production, grains).

It appears that their laying hens are kept in cages and completely housed. Turkeys are grown on open range, using sunflowers for shade and feed supplement. Much experimental work is going on with poultry, cattle and hogs.

The veterinarian university visited seemed well-staffed and equipped with high enrollments and a rigorous schedule. Experimental farms were lavishly mechanized and equipped, and must have a generous quota from the state. One gets the impression that no stone is being left unturned to produce more food.

Our trip to Kharkov was made by train. Conductors and porters were mostly women. The train was the most modern and smooth riding in my experience. The gauge of the track is slightly wider than the U. S. A., and they use concrete ties. The system was very impressive to me.

My stay in the U. S. S. R. left me with the impression that much progress has been made since the cities were destroyed in 1941-1943, that the professional people are enthusiastically working to meet shortages in certain lines, particularly consumer goods and foodstuffs and housing. My impression of progress was borne out in conversations with people that had visited the U. S. S. R. three to five years ago.

We have had a very busy year and are still raising the "best turkeys in the world."

Rev. Bruce Roberts, United Church of Christ Association Minister for Ministers, will give an illustrated talk on his visit to the far east this past summer at the couples' club meeting of the West Parish Congregational Church Monday evening, Jan. 8, at 6:30.

The purpose of this visit was to deliver gift certificates under sponsorship of the "Bridal Project."

In a quote from a letter of appreciation from Microcass, Paul E. Marshall, the United Church of Christ worker there commented, "It is not often that one finds a man of the cloth who can exhibit such diversity as Bruce Roberts who paid us a whirlwind visit last August. Now tell me, where can you find a piano tuner, a carpenter, an electrician, a telephone expert, a sewing machine repair man, a truck driver and a herdman all in one wrapper?" I often think of the little things Bruce Roberts did in the week that he was here. None of them were monumental. None of them of the nature to which his name should have been inscribed, and yet, they so much became a part of the work here."
